Vocabulary pill

Hit the nail on the head

This idiom refers to doing or saying something that is precisely right.

During the team meeting, Sarah hit the nail on the head by identifying the root cause of our declining customer satisfaction – a lack of prompt customer support.

Pre-task

Read the following sentences. How is language being used?

Punctuation tip!

When the sentence starts with the result clause, you don't need to use a comma: The marketing plan will feel more practical if we are efficient with our brainstorming.

Examples:

- If we change our marketing strategy, we will see a significant increase in sales.
- If we make our communication more efficient, our customers will view us as a more reliable service providers.
- The marketing plan will feel more practical if we are efficient with our brainstorming.

We use the first conditional when we talk about future situations we believe are real or possible under a particular set of circumstances.

First conditional sentences would go like this:

If + simple present → subject + simple future

Remember:

- You can also use other future tenses in the result clause e.g. going to, may, might, can

Examples:
If we use social media marketing, we may see our numbers growing in the near future.
